

$10,000 VERDICT FOR WOMAN

ANNIE K. ELINE FOR KILLING OF HER HUSBAND

When W. M. R. R. Train Struck Auto at Smyser Crossing Near York.

The action of Annie K. Eline against the Western Maryland Railroad for damages for the killing of her husband at a crossing on the York pike has been an unusual one from the start and ended in the largest verdict ever awarded in a damage case of the kind in the county.

The case was unusual in having occurred in York county and being tried in Adams county and tried here after action had been started and abandoned in York county. The accident took place on the evening of September 13, 1913. Suit was instituted by the widow in York county and the case came on for trial. The trial of the case had gone forward to a point where it had been given to the jury when the attorneys for the plaintiff concluded a mistake had been made in the presentation of the case and before jury returned a verdict, leave was obtained to withdraw case from jury and discontinue it.

Sometime later suit was started in Adams county and service made upon the railroad company and the question was raised by the company as to the jurisdiction of the court. Judge Swope then presiding, decided that jurisdiction for any suit was in York county where the accident took place and where the defendant operated a line of railroad. The plaintiff contended that suit could be brought in an county in which the railroad was operating. Upon appeal to the Supreme Court the contention of the plaintiff was sustained.

The trial of the case began on Monday, being the only civil case fixed for the week. J. K. Boyd, Esq., an attorney of Baltimore, was associated with J. Donald Swope, Esq., for the plaintiff, and the defendant company was represented by C. S. Duncan, Esq., of this place, Richard E. Czekran and George Schmidt, Esqs., of York.

The accident occurred at Smyser's crossing over the York pike, about a mile east of the toll gate on the outskirts of York. The party in car were Mr. and Mrs. Eline, Frank Rodgers and Harry Gerwick. The car belonged to Mr. Eline. The party had been to Emmitsburg where Mr. Eline had installed some refrigerating apparatus at Mr. St. Mary's College and party were making the return trip to Baltimore by way of York. Mr. Rodgers was driving. The Smyser crossing was reached about 7:45 in the evening and a train coming from York overtook the auto and Mr. Eline was killed. No other members of the party were seriously hurt.

The evidence for the plaintiff was the examination and cross-examination of those in the auto. Frank Rodgers, Harry Gerwick and Mrs. Eline. They testified that no whistle was blown, nor bell sounded as the engine approached the crossing, that the electric signal at that point was out of order and there was no headlight on the engine. Mr. Rodgers, driving the car was not a paid chauffeur and had been over the road. He testified that his attention had been attracted to culvert or bridge near crossing and that he had to drive carefully to avoid striking some logs on the bridge. After he had passed this, he got a signal from Mr. Eline sitting in front seat beside him, warning him of engine. He tried to turn down the side of the track but machine was struck. Eline was found lying near the car on his face with a fractured skull.

When the evidence for the plaintiff was completed counsel for plaintiff moved for a compulsory non-suit. This motion was argued by the attorneys for several hours. Judge McPherson ruled that the case was one for the jury to pass upon any contributing negligence.

The railroad company had eighteen witnesses who were next heard. Grier Hersh, James G. Glessner and Thos. Bair were returning to York that night and testified to the fact that it was a moonlight night. Ten of the other witnesses were passengers on the train, and Edward Switzer and his daughter lived near the place of the accident. These witnesses testified to the moonlight and that train ought to have been seen. One to having seen headlight on engine in York, others to some signal, either blowing of whistle or ringing of bell.

At the conclusion of the evidence the law of the case was argued to the court. Then George Schmidt, Esq., and C. S. Duncan, Esq., addressed the jury on behalf of the company and J. K. Boyd, Esq., made the concluding address to the jury for the plaintiff.

Thursday morning Judge McPherson charged the jury on the law of the case and jury retired about 10 o'clock to deliberate. The jury had their dinner served to them in their room and did not come in with a verdict until after three o'clock, when they reported a verdict in favor of plaintiff for ten thousand dollars. A motion was immediately made for a new trial and in arrest of judgment.

William Timmins.

William Timmins, the 18-year-old son of Charles A. Timmins of this place, and grandson of Hon. and Mrs. Wm. H. Tipton, disappeared from his home in Pittsburgh on Wednesday of last week. All efforts to trace him have so far brought no light as to his present whereabouts. He had been employed on night work at the Dunlevy Meat Packing Company and was living at the home of his uncle, James Cannon. Wednesday afternoon he started for the shopping district of Pittsburgh to buy a suit of clothes and had telephoned a young lady to meet him at a picture show. He failed to keep this appointment. District Attorney Homer N. Young placed a county detective at the disposal of James Cannon and the city was searched with the result that the police had declared that they are satisfied he is not in that city. Placards with photographs and description of the young man have been sent to all recruiting stations and spread broadcast throughout the country. Effort is being exhausted to locate the boy. He is 5 feet 9 inches, weighs about 140 lbs., black hair, blue eyes, fair complexion, slight scar above right eye. When last seen wore dark green striped suit, dark tan shoes and black and white checkered silk cap. Information can be sent to relatives at Gettysburg or James Cannon, 7147 Idlewood St., Pittsburgh, Pa.

A RED CROSS BRANCH GRECHT-MERTZ NUPTIALS

ORGANIZED IN LITTLESTOWN WITH FIFTY MEMBERS. MERTZ HOME BEAUTIFULLY DECORATED WITH ROSES.

Adams County Independent of Littlestown, Gives Following Account of Organization. After Generous Gifts to This Place, from Mr. Grecht, the Town Gives Him a Bride.

A most inspiring and patriotic meeting was held Tuesday evening in the High School building when a local unit of the American Red Cross was organized. Mrs. Elsie Singmaster Lewars and Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Arch. McClean, of the Gettysburg unit, were present to assist in the organization. Prof. R. D. Knouse called the meeting to order, appointing Mrs. McClean chairman, and Mrs. E. D. Buckey secretary pro tem. Mrs. Lewars gave a very interesting address, outlining the work to be done by the local unit. She told of what the Red Cross organizations are accomplishing. In comparison with other countries the United States has the least number of Red Cross workers. These organizations are formed for the purpose of doing great good in our own country and the demand is such that no one should hesitate. After the singing of America, Rev. W. K. Fleck spoke on the work of the French hero Gen. Joffre, and the advantages of the new conscription bill. A motion was then made by Mrs. Fleck, seconded by Miss Lydia Hartman, that a local unit be organized, and it was unanimously carried. Mr. McClean gave a talk about the wonderful work being done by the Red Cross, after which Prof. Knouse, Rev. Fleck and Mrs. H. A. Stonessifer were appointed as nominating committee, and made the following appointments: Chairman, E. D. Buckey; vice chairman, Mrs. H. S. Crouse; secretary, Mrs. Chas. H. Mayers; treasurer, W. R. Jones. Executive committee: Dr. H. A. Stonessifer, Mrs. W. K. Fleck, Dr. H. S. Crouse, Mrs. E. D. Buckey, Robt. Smith, Rev. T. M. Stone, Burton M. Alteman, E. G. C. Forrest, Mrs. C. L. Mehring, John A. Mayers, Wm. D. Nau, and Mrs. R. H. Wilson. While the nominating committee was making out the list Miss Pauline Stonessifer and Alvin Wilson rendered a beautiful selection on the piano and cornet. Thirty-nine dollars was pledged at the meeting. The campaign for members will be energetically conducted and it is expected that quite a large membership will be added to 50 who enrolled Tuesday evening.

Red Cross at Work.

On Tuesday afternoon 45 members of the Red Cross Society began work on hospital supplies at the Court House, using the room of the Mothers' Assistance Fund and a grand jury room. About 30 were at work on Thursday afternoon. There is a great deal of work to be done, preparations must be made before each meeting to have plenty of material for the members go at the work with a will that accomplishes large results in an afternoon's time.

The New Way —and the Old

To-day we answer the telephone as "Jones & Company, Mr. Smith speaking," or "This is Mr. Smith's residence."

It is concise and definite, smacks of efficiency and eliminates the uncertainty that followed the old-fashioned "Hello" or—worse still—"Who is this?"

The person calling, too, replies with, "Mr. Brown wishes to talk with Mr. Smith." These are the telephone "introductions" of to-day—and they make for good service all around.

PROHIBITION BY NATIONS

CARRYING ON THE WAR MADE NECESSARY.

What These Nations Have Done Point the Way to the United States.

Dr. W. A. Evans says, "I am sure that the average person who guessed the result of the war did not include Europe wide prohibition among his prophecies. Three months after the beginning of hostilities two contestants had prohibited strong drink, and most of the contending nations were throwing their moral force in favor of temperance.

The Russian government had been in the wholesale and retail liquor business for many years. It owned the vodka factories and the vodka saloons as well. Several years ago it inaugurated a policy of gradual restriction of the sale and use of vodka. As the saloon was a large source of revenue to the Russian government, it was natural to suppose that when an expensive war was undertaken the government would double its efforts to make money by the saloons. On the contrary it decided that saloons were too hard on the people. It knew that in this time of stress the people would be called upon to stand all that was possible. The government decided that it was good judgment to spare them from vodka.

In France the sale of their very toxic drink, absinthe, was prohibited. Several years ago the effects of absinthe were tested by the authorities. A policy of gradual repression was undertaken. In order to conserve the forces of people that they might withstand the shock of war, the government now prohibits the sale of absinthe to both soldiers and civilians. The French Academy of Medicine has endorsed this policy of its own government and also the vodka policy of the Russian government.

The efforts made by the Germans have been to lessen the consumption of alcoholic beverages by advising against their use. The German Emperor began advising his people to be temperate many years ago. Since the war began he has repeated his advice. The German Correspondent to the Journal of American Medical Association recently wrote that the first orders of the army were to restrict the use of alcoholic drinks to the minimum.

The English government has thrown all of its influence on the side of temperance. It could easily have been foreseen that when Lord Kitchener assumed charge of the English army, a positive program against all forms of immorality would be undertaken. This is the position taken by English authorities: "It has been proved by most careful and complete experiments, as attested to by Field Marshal Lord Roberts and Field Marshal Lord Wolsey and many other army leaders, that alcohol as drink slows the power to see signals, confuses prompt judgment, spoils accurate shooting, hastens fatigue, lessens resistance to disease and exposure, increases shock from wounds. We therefore most strongly urge you for your own health and efficiency that at least as long as the war lasts you should become total abstainers." These positions are assumed because in the sober judgment of the governmental heads the use of alcohol makes for inefficiency and inefficiency is expensive.

Anything that strikes at the health and welfare of an individual and nation must be taken severely in hand even to the extent of depriving the individual of the liberty that means self-destruction.

Even China, decadent as it is, has shown the courage and ability to grapple with the plague of opium and has abolished it as thoroughly and completely as Russia has the vodka.

Is the United States to be the only great nation enslaved by the liquor problem? Cannot Congress learn the lesson to do for our people what Russia has been moved to do for her people. State prohibition has done much but its limitations are such that it falls short of being an effective and thorough remedy for intemperance as experience has painfully demonstrated. Only nation wide prohibition, with the Federal Government taking upon itself the manufacture and sale of such alcoholic products as are necessary for mechanical and medical purposes, will rid this nation of the fearful curse which has been imposed upon it.

From figures taken from the Internal Revenue Department we find that more than two billion gallons of intoxicating liquors were consumed by the people in 1913—to be exact, 2,128,452,226 gallons, enough for each man, woman, and child in the United States to have 90 quarts.

The money spent on this drink was $1,724,000,000, enough to have raised most any other nation, to say nothing of the indirect loss occasioned by drunkenness, crime, idleness, sickness, pauperism and crime.

Drunkenness is the foundation cause of our prisons, insane asylums, and almshouses.—From M. Edith Peters, Guernsey, Pa.

Fencing a Continent.

The state of South Australia has since 1891 erected 20,138 miles of "vermin fences," enough to encircle the globe and with the remnant build a double line fence along the southern border of the United States. When contracts now running are completed the mileage will be much increased. New South Wales has expended over $27,000,000 for rabbit extermination and has within its borders 98,000 miles of fence. One of Western Australia's fences extends entirely across the continent. Of late years the rabbit has been repaying in part for his keeping his board, as it were. He goes to swell the total of food exports from the commonwealth. Along the country roads rabbits may be seen hung on fences awaiting the passage of the rabbit carts, which convey them to the packing houses to be prepared for shipment as frozen meat and hides. Practically all are exported. The Australian does not eat "vermin."—National Geographic Magazine.

His Arguments Are Unanswerable.

We put it to him this way: "Why don't you get married?" And he answered us honestly: "I'm not earning enough to support a wife, and I'm not lazy enough to let a wife support me." And that's the best reason we ever heard. Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Logic.

COLDS AFFECT THE KIDNEYS.

Many Gettysburg People Have Found This to be True.

Are you wretched in bad weather? Does every cold settle on your kidneys?

Does your back ache and become weak?

Are urinary passages irregular and distressing?

These symptoms are cause to suspect kidney weakness.

Weakened kidneys need quick help. Doan's Kidney Pills are especially prepared for weakened kidneys.

Gettysburg people recommend them.

Geo. E. Stover, 147 Hanover St., Gettysburg, Pa., says: "About a year ago I had trouble with my back and kidneys. There was stiffness and a bearing-down ache just over my hips. My kidneys were extremely active after the slightest cold. I heard of Doan's Kidney Pills and got some at the People's Drug Store. They gave me fine benefit very quickly. I haven't had to use any kidney medicine since and I believe the results are permanent."

ON WHICH ROAD ARE YOU

SHORT ARTICLE BY W. W. WHALEN.

Telling Some Real Facts About Roads and Bridges in and Out of Buchanan Valley.

When I was preparing to come and live in Buchanan Valley, I was told I'd be off the map. I didn't believe it then. I do now. And why? Because of the roads. I've walked the rocky roads to Dublin, but believe me those Dutch roads along here make Dublin look like a real pike. Some day you may find me off the map completely. Then you can write behind my name: Dead Corpse! And if you wish to find my carcass, so along our roads.

Last week I took some kiddies out with me for an airing. We nearly reached Orrtanna—and heaven, or somewhere else! That covered bridge near Orrtanna had two very loose boards in its flooring. I suppose Orrtanna covered the bridge to hide its hideous nakedness. As soon as my Ford (I nearly said auto) hit the bridge a board flew up in protest and hit it—hit the little car right in the solar plexus behind the radiator, and threw us against the wall. Good for us there was a wall, or we'd be going yet. When I recovered from the shock, I took a squint back at my kiddies, and found them gasping like chicks fresh from the shell. My own skull felt as if it needed trepanning. The Ford grunted and went on, because she was a Ford. Any other tin rival would have lost her appendix. That day I had guests, also Fording it. They had two blowouts between Cashtown and Orrtanna. They solemnly vowed never to come back. Yes, those roads are bad enough, but if you wish to reach the limit of your patience, take a trip through Buchanan Valley. If you don't lose a tire, you'll lose your head after a few of the breakers. Losing your temper goes without saying. Chances are, you'll lose the state of grace. You'll feel afterwards that rough, rude journey started you pretty well along the broad highway that leads to the everlasting bonfire. I leave my gates open night and day, knowing my green truck won't be damaged. Even a cow disdains to hoof our road.

Why is it, neighbors, that Buchanan Valley, a well situated place, with plenty of splendid farms and loads of good eats and fine-built men and handsome women—why, I ask, must the Valley be off the map because of the roads? All we need is a state road for two miles, and then we are joined to the Lincoln Highway on the one hand and the Shippensburg pike on the other. This baby road would be the connecting link between prosperity and pleasure. Then auto parties (the things that make the world go round) can run along and see us and our goods, get their money's worth, and make us feel like Uncle Sam's citizens. Whenever I laboriously get out of the Valley or back into it, I experience the sensation of a sailor trying to steer through a sea of submarines. You office holders, we cast our votes out here to put you there. We thought you were the real article, and that's why we voted. Why don't you make good some of the promises you bawled out at us? Give us a road, that's all we ask, and then watch us do things. If you don't we'll do you.

Consolidated Public Schools.

As we stand on the threshold of the world's war we must not forget that our children, who are soon to take our places and carry on our responsibilities, must still be cared for just as they have been.

One of the principal problems concerning the health of the children is brought up by their association in school life. During vacation time, which is now approaching, children do not congregate together indoors as they do when the school term is on, and it is in the vacation season that we have the lowest death rate from communicable diseases. It is a different story, and a sad one, during our school months.

The State Department of Health has a chart which shows the relative number of deaths of our children from communicable diseases during the various months. It is made up of columns and the height of each column tells the story for its particular month.

During the summer, the vacation period, the chart shows only little stumps of columns. Just as soon as the schools begin, and children are forced to sit together in rooms with closed windows oftentimes, these little stumps begin to grow. The sight of these higher columns is a sad one to the health officer who keenly feels his responsibilities.

The broad question of the advantages and disadvantages of the "consolidated schools" is not to be considered in this little chat, but certain of their aspects, as they affect health, are worth looking into.

These larger school houses, of course, draw pupils from over a much larger area than did the little red school house of the past. The longer distance of travel takes more time, and for this reason, perhaps more than any other, conveyances are provided to transport the children.

Any old trap seems acceptable and its carrying capacity is elastic, so the children, boys and girls, are simply piled in. No caretakers are in charge and it is just a jam of the strong and weak, the sick and well, the vulgar and gentle of both sexes, and they are packed in as sardines in boxes.

The air in many of the vehicles soon becomes foul. If one child happens to be at the beginning of the initial symptoms of measles, every child in the conveyance who has not had the disease is likely to go down with it. While it is not generally considered by the public, unfortunately, one of the serious diseases, it often leaves the system in a very susceptible condition, so that tuberculosis or other serious affections may follow in its wake.

The present system of carrying children to and from the larger centers of education is hard on health, morals and life.

If a thing is worth doing, it is worth doing right. It is suggested that we stop organizing any more consolidated school centers until we organize proper ways and means of transportation, those which will care for both morals and health.—Little Talks on Health and Hygiene by Samuel G. Dixon, M.D., LL.D., D.Sc., Commissioner of Health.

Letter from Bishop McDevitt.

In the letter to all the priests and members of the Catholic Church in the diocese of Harrisburg, Bishop Philip R. McDevitt calls upon the faithful to manifest in no uncertain tone their loyalty, devotion and self-sacrifice to the country and the flag in this, the nation's hour of trial. The bishop's letter, which was read at all the masses in the Catholic churches on Sunday morning, is as follows: "To the Priests and Laity of the Diocese of Harrisburg:

"A crisis has come in the life of our country. War has been declared by the supreme authority of the government of the United States. The President, as the responsible head of the nation, calls upon all citizens to rally in defense of the flag of the Republic.

"Before this solemn proclamation was made, liberty of opinion in regard to the questions at issue in the appalling European conflict was the right of every man. But now the only proper attitude for any citizen to assume is a patriotic loyalty to the regularly constituted authorities of the nation.

"In this hour of trial, no citizens should manifest the evidences of true citizenship more sincerely and readily than the devout followers of the Catholic faith—whose teachings command in no uncertain tone, loyalty, devotion, and self-sacrifice when the President and our national representatives decree that the United States of America is at war with a foreign power.

"While, dear brethren, we know that the Catholic manhood and the Catholic womanhood of America will hesitate at no sacrifice, now that war has come, we entreat all to pray frequently and fervently that this conflict of the ages may soon end, and that peace, the peace of Our Lord Jesus Christ, may soon come to a distracted world.

"PHILIP R. McDEVITT,
"Bishop of Harrisburg."

Isle of the Blest.

The king of England is not the only king in the British Isles. There is also the king of the Isle of Bardsey, an island of Wales in the Irish sea, in the County of Carnarvon. This kingdom, with its seventy-six inhabitants—that figure including the king and queen—is, we are reminded, a free and independent realm. The monarch is not only sovereign ruler, but physician, schoolmaster, magistrate. He neither owes nor gives obedience to the laws of England. His subjects pay no taxes and live luxuriously upon barley bread, milk and butter. No newspapers trouble the peace of the teeming populace, and nobody on the island troubles himself about what goes on outside his native rock bound coast. They are a happy people, though perhaps their ignorance of the fact that they are so may mar the perfection of their contentment.—Paris Journal.

Richter's Conducting.

It is difficult to define just what differentiates a good conductor from a mere time beater, but a story that is told of Richter may help indirectly. In the prelude to "Tristan und Isolde" occurs a beautiful passage for the oboe, which rises, swells and dies away to a pianissimo most effectively. To imitate the quality of the playing which he wanted from this instrument, Richter, bearing the time with his right hand, placed his left hand over his heart, and the oboe player at once reported in a direction all inclusive in its simplicity and intelligibility.

San Rooms.

One of the best san rooms of which there is any record was in Madrid, at the foot of Cameros del Castillo, prime old, now under the regency. Dinner is to be served at one end of the convalescent. In the shadow of tall palms, where fountain played, birds with song, music sang, and the air was as fragrant as the tropics. For comfort, deep and cozy were put down on the white marble floors.

Legs of a Snake.

The people of Uruguay have some queer ideas and superstitions. One of them is that if one throws a live snake into a fire it will stick out its legs, which it keeps concealed under its scales. This idea probably arose from the scales sticking outwards as the snake felt the heat.

Settled.

Old Gentleman (at his daughter's wedding)—My dear, I don't see how I can get along without you. Bride—Oh, that's all right, pa. Since the ceremony was performed my husband has confessed that he hasn't enough saved to start housekeeping, so you won't leave me after all.

More Satisfactory.

A poetic contributor recently submitted a manuscript on an offshoot, entitled "The Lay of the Lark." It was rejected with this editorial note: "Rejected with thanks. Send a few specimens of the lay of the hen just now. We will gladly accept them."

Excursionists will have no extra trouble or expense in seeing the battlefield. There seems to be some misapprehension on that score by reason of guides being licensed. The guides are licensed for the protection of the traveler. All guides have passed examinations and are qualified to explain the battlefield. They have been receiving instructions so as to help them in that work. The battlefield is free to all who wish to see it on foot or in their own conveyances but when guides are desired the licensed guides are those to be used for the protection of the travelers and public. If their services are not satisfactory, complaints can be filed with the National Park Commission and thus both the individual and the public may be protected. Employment of those without license means to be beyond the protection that has been provided.

THIRTY FOUR REASONS FOR POLITICAL CORRUPTION.

A court sentence in Pittsburgh on last Monday clearly demonstrated why the politics in the great Keystone State is corrupt and the party in power in the State is the beneficiary of this corruption. There were thirty-four self-confessed exhibits or reasons for this political corruption. Thirty-four brewing corporations of Pennsylvania voluntarily placed themselves in the position of being guilty of political corruption by agreeing to take sentences without trial on charges of corruption in the 1914 elections of a United States Senator and 20 members of Congress. Judge W. H. S. Thomson of the U. S. District Court fined the U. S. Breweries' Association $50,000, the limit, and fined the 34 brewing corporations of Pennsylvania from $450 to $500, a total of $52,000.

The Court adopted the method of brewery associations in levying assessments, the per barrel production basis. Yearly production of the 34 breweries is 3,084,452 barrels. The fines, $52,000, make the average something over 1 per cent per barrel of production for the breweries.

A vitriolic attack on United States Attorney E. Lowry Humes, who directed the inquiry and who is a Democrat and appointed to his position by President Wilson, enlivened the closing minutes, and was heightened when Judge Thomson told attorneys for Brewing Association that if they wished to withdraw their pleas and proceed with trials the Court would accommodate them. Both attorneys promptly replied that the pleas would stand.

It is well for our people without regard to party to know and recognize these self-confessed despoilers, responsible for political corruption in the State. These thirty-four reasons are the best thirty-four reasons for a law to prohibit contributions to political campaigns from liquor interests. The companies fined are the following:

- Philadelphia breweries fined:
- Fred. Feil Brewing Company, $500.
- Peter Schemm & Sons, $750.
- Theodore Finkenauer, $800.
- Robert Smith, Ale Brewing Company, $850.

- F. A. Poth & Sons, Inc., $2200.
- Continental Brewing Company, $2500.
- C. Schmidt & Son's $2300.
- Bergner & Engle Brewing Company, $3000.
- Other breweries fined:
- Fayette Brewing Company, Uniontown, $450.
- Anchor Brewing Company, Brackridge, $500.

PRESIDENTIAL SUFFRAGE WANTED.

Defeated in their attempt to have the Legislature give the voters of the State an opportunity to decide the question of woman suffrage, women of Pennsylvania are again before the House asking the members to give them directly as much suffrage as is in their power, namely, presidential suffrage, or the right to vote for all presidential candidates. A bill to this effect was introduced last Monday, April 30, by Representative Lex N. Mitchell of Jefferson county, who has sponsored several prohibition bills this session.

The authority under which women ask the Pennsylvania Legislature to grant them presidential suffrage is set forth in Article II, Section 2, of the Constitution of the United States, which provides that

"Each State shall appoint in such manner as the Legislatures thereof may direct, the number of electors, equal to the whole number of Senators and Representatives, to which the State may be entitled in the Congress," etc.

The women seeking presidential suffrage further declare that it has been ruled in other States where presidential suffrage has been granted to women "The source of this power of the State Legislatures being the United States Constitution, the word 'male' defining the qualification of the usual electors of the State does not preclude the vote for presidential electors being extended to women, because, according to Article VI, Section 2, of the Constitution of the United States, that Constitution shall be 'the Supreme Law of the Land, anything in the Constitution or laws of any State to the contrary notwithstanding."

The admitted reality of Pennsylvania with 17 States having presidential suffrage demands the passage of the bill.

Selective Draft Wins.

The Selective Draft Army Bill carried in the Senate and House last Saturday. There were differences in the two bills though largely similar and a conference committee has been getting into shape the bill to be finally passed by both Houses. The chief difference has been that of ages and the age limit expected from the conference is from 21 to 35 years of age. Other features of measure authorized President to raise, organize, equip and officer the regular army to maximum strength of 287,000 men and national guard to approximately 625,000 men.

Provides, under selection, that President in addition shall raise a force of 500,000.

In his discretion, President shall raise a second army of 500,000.

Total armed forces contemplated, 1,900,000 men.

Exempts from military service are the Vice President; legislative, executive and judicial officers of the United States and the several States, persons belonging to recognized religious organizations whose creeds are against war; ministers of any religious denomination.

President given discretion to exempt or select for partial service custom house clerks; persons handling mails; workmen employed in arsenals, navy yards and armories; persons engaged in industries necessary to maintenance of the mills; pilots and marines of merchant marine; persons having dependent families; all persons morally and physically deficient. Agriculture will be protected.

Food Supply Meetings.

Aaron I. Weidner of Arendtsville, Adams county, representative for the State Board of Agriculture, has received from State Board of Agriculture the following letter:

"We are facing a food crisis in our State and Nation. Pennsylvania is strategically vital to the nation in this unhappy war period. We must in every honorable manner possible uphold our national government and to that end I hereby urge and direct that you at once, in conjunction with the Local Committee of Public Safety, use your utmost endeavors to secure the largest possible production of food in Pennsylvania.

"Your official obligation and your unusual knowledge of agriculture warrant me in laying this patriotic duty upon you.

"Proceed at once to urge all our people to plant and produce food. Thus you will serve your country in a direct and patriotic manner."

"M. G. Brumbaugh."

I would urge on each member of the Board to take as active a part as possible in local meetings and assist in local organizations by going to the meetings and speaking and advising along agricultural lines.

Yours very truly,
Chas. E. Patton.

Governor Brumbaugh has sent the following letter to the Public Safety Committee:

To all Members of the Public Safety Committee of Pennsylvania:

That we are facing a food crisis in this Commonwealth and in the world cannot be disputed. That the amount of food produced in this country during the present season will have much to do with the success or failure of all our war measures is manifest to all thoughtful citizens. That in the next thirty days the quantity of food possible for our people and for the nations of the world will be determined by the amount of soil plowed and seed planted is apparent.

I, therefore, call upon you as a member of the State or Local Public Safety Committee to use your utmost endeavor to mobilize upon the soil of Pennsylvania the largest possible army of industrial workers. Let all other considerations give way to this paramount question in this emergency.

Let Pennsylvania answer the call of our government not only with its quota of troops, but with a full quota of food. This is our patriotic duty and these our days of opportunity. Let us not lose one of them.

Very truly yours,
M. G. BRUMBAUGH.

It should always be put on a staff, or pole, if possible.

If on a rope, from house to pole, or tree, in front of house, the Blue Field should always be out from house.

If hung in front of a building under or between windows, but flat against the building, the Blue Field must always be hung toward the North or East, as follows:

On the streets running North and South, on the East Side of such street the Blue Field would be toward the North and would be in the upper left-hand corner as you would look at the flag from the street. On the West side the Blue Field would be in the upper right-hand corner.

On streets running East and West, the Blue Field would be toward the East, so that on the North side of such street, the Blue Field would be in the upper right-hand corner, and on the South Side of such streets, the Blue Field would be in the upper left-hand corner.

TUESDAY

HOW the old range does love to heat things up, especially when it's sizzling hot outside! Then, there's always the coal or wood to carry, always that constant raking and poking, pulling this and pushing that, to keep the fire going.

But the ironing must be done. There's no other way to do it, is there? No, not unless you have a New Perfection Oil Cook Stove in your kitchen.

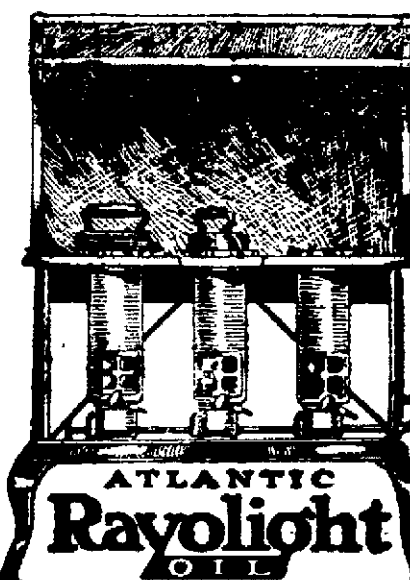

NEW PERFECTION OIL COOK-STOVES

have made thousands of women happy—freed them from the ironing day and the everyday drudgery and overwork you have now.

A Perfection will heat the irons on Tuesdays. And it's always ready to bake, fry, boil or roast at the strike of a match. You'll be particularly interested in the separate oven and the fireless cooker. Your dealer will explain about them. Ask him.

One of the many good points about a Perfection is that it burns the most economical fuel—kerosene. And the best kerosene is Rayolight. It's so highly refined that it burns without smoking, sputtering, smelling or charring the wicks. Look for this sign:

Scandinavian Politeness.
Two points which attract the attention of travelers in Sweden are the punctilious honesty and truthfulness of the inhabitants. When asking for places at a theater, for instance, the ticket clerk never fails to inform the applicant if owing to a crowded state of the house a better position would be secured with a cheaper ticket than the one asked for. Again, when parcels are taken by steamer from Stockholm to country places in the neighborhood they are just placed on the quay, where they frequently remain half a day without being claimed. It never seems to occur to any one that they could possibly be taken by anybody but their rightful owners. On a cruise trip of any length a little book lies in the saloon of the steamer, in which each passenger keeps his own account of the number of meals, coffee, etc., he takes during the journey.

The Clever Brahman.
Speaking of the great power the Brahmins in India possess in localizing thought, a prominent Brahman once said: "We would consider a game of chess as played in this country mere child's play. An ordinary Brahman chess player could carry on three or four games at a time without inconvenience. The usual game played by the Brahmins consists in checkmating with one pawn designated when the play begins. I have seen a man perform a long problem in multiplication and division, at the same time noting the various sounds and discussions going on about him in the room. I have seen a man compose a triple acrostic in Sanskrit in a given meter, at the same time having three well versed men trying to overthrow him in his argument on religion."

Point of the Cape of Good Hope.
Cape point, which terminates the mighty headland known as the Cape of Good Hope, consists of a towering promontory of sandstone, which rises from the sea to an altitude of 840 feet. At the base of this stands a big solitary column which is known as Vasco da Gama's pillar. The lighthouse which here illuminates the meeting place of the Atlantic and Indian oceans is one of the most important and most useful of its kind. It is visible from a distance of thirty miles. The cliff scenery is wild and sublime, the rocks are magnified, and the far-reaching sea, with its white surf beating on the iron-bound coast, is impressive. In the water directly beneath the cliff sharks are abundant.

Ancients Used Few Adjectives.
The plethora of adjectives in modern literature contrasts with the abstinence of the ancients in this respect. A contributor to the Italian review, Minerva, with time to spare, has made a count of substantives and adjectives in the works of Vergil, Dante and Leonardo. In the second book of the "Aeneid," which contains the fall of Troy, there are 1,027 nouns and 689 adjectives. In Dante's "Divina Commedia," out of the 6,215 adjectives which it contains only seventeen are in the superlative. These are facts from which the tyro in literature may well draw a moral.—Christian Science Monitor.

Just a Suggestion.
Before a man is hired to work at certain munitions plants he is required to give a complete account of himself and to answer a series of printed questions on a regular form.
The most important question of all appears at the head of each pedigree form. It is printed in bold faced type and inquires, "Where shall we ship your remains?"
Many a prospective workman gets "cold feet" when this significant inquiry greets his eyes.—New York Sun.

The President's Title.
Washington, the first president, was inaugurated April 30, 1789. The ceremony was delayed several days while congress disputed as to whether the chief magistrate should have such title as "his excellency," "his highness" or the like. It was decided that he should be simply "the president of the United States."

Second Base Play.
Second base is called the "pivot position of the infield." This is because most of the plays center around second base. Many double plays read "short to second to first; third to second to first; second to short to first; first to second to first," and so on. Records show teams strong on double plays are usually teams well up in the race. Generally speaking, ability to make double plays speaks well for a team's defense. A good defense means few runs for the opposition, provided the pitching is of the proper kind. Since second base is the pivot position, much of the team's success depends upon the way that base is played. If the shortstop and second baseman work smoothly it usually has the effect of balancing the rest of the team. A club that is constantly mussing up plays around the second sack never causes much trouble for the opposition.—Billy Evans in New York World.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINTS.
Sore Throat.
The most frequent cause of distress or discomfort in the throat is exposure to cold and wet. Other conditions cause sore throat, such as exposure to infection. It may be of gouty or rheumatic origin. It may be excited by local irritants, such as hot drinks or the inhalation of noxious gases.
In mild cases of sore throat a gargle of a saturated solution of boric acid, used every four hours, will give relief. In severe cases the application to the neck of cloths wrung out of cold water proves grateful. Sucking small bits of ice affords much relief.
Internal treatment is needed. For this a seidlitz powder is very useful or a dose of salts upon rising in the morning. If, however, there is any fever or the tonsils are red and swollen or show tiny yellow or white spots on their surface, send as soon as possible for a physician.

Selling a Pair of Shoes.
I spent a couple of hours the other day in a shoe factory.
"These," said the head of the firm, pointing to a dainty pair of boots, "we sell wholesale at $10."
"What does the customer pay for them in a store?" I inquired.
"Sometimes not less than $20," he replied.
So it appears to cost as much to sell a shoe as to make a shoe.
The farmer who raised the calf that yielded the skin, the butcher who removed the hide, the tanner who converted it into leather, the railroad which hauled it 2,000 miles and the factory which carefully made the leather into a shoe, together split fifty-fifty with the exclusive shop which retails it to your wife.—Girard in Philadelphia Ledger.

Our Modern Factory Spoon.
For our modern factory made spoon the stock is first rolled and cross rolled to get the graded thickness that is needed. The spoon outline is then obtained by means of cutting out dies. The blanks thus formed are struck up by another set of dies, which ornament the front and back and even bend the spoon into its proper shape, at the same time stamping the required "sterling" and the maker's mark. If a spoon is made by this latest of processes the sterling mark can be found raised on the surface instead of incised, as was the case when the marking was done separately.

Desperate Warriors.
It has long been a moot point whether single or married men make the best soldiers. Some maintain that the lack of wife and family tends to make a man more reckless of his life, therefore a good soldier. Others say that the married man is almost a veteran when he enters the ranks, being inured to combat, therefore a good soldier. A French colonel was once questioned upon this point. "Both are right," said he. "Look yonder! Do you see that battalion of happy, devil-may-care fellows? They are all single men, and they would take their lives in their hands. But look again! Do you see those taciturn, somber, gloomy looking men there? They are all married, and in a hand to hand fight they are terrorists." "What is the name of the battalion?" asked the inquirer. "They are called," said the colonel gravely, "the Children of Despair!"—London Chronicle.

Pot and Kettle.
There is a proverb much heard nowadays that we never could see the sense of. "The pot can't call the kettle black." Why not, we should like to know? The kettle is black. It ought to be called black. Who has a better right to speak with confidence about the faults of the kettle than the pot, which has for years hung on the same crane and inhaled the same smoke? If there is anything that would make the pot seem less sooty in our eyes it is giving us a clear reflection of the image of the kettle. Shall no one point out blackness anywhere unless he knows himself to be speckless? Would the pot rise in our estimation if it followed the custom of its critics and said, "The kettle is white, as white as I am?"—Independent.

New York City's Bridges.
Irrespective of the elevated railroad system comprising the Second, Third, Sixth and Ninth avenue lines and the elevated portions of the Broadway and Lenox avenue sections of the subway, New York city has forty-two bridges spanning the East and Harlem rivers, Newtown creek and other waterways. These roads over rivers, including the Brooklyn, Manhattan, Williamsburg and Queensboro spans, among the greatest in the world, represent, with the real estate requisite for their approaches, an investment by the municipality of more than $135,000,000.

An Imaginary Interview.
"Did you say that the times are out of joint?"
"Yes," replied Hamlet. "You see, I have to be content with old time phraseology. If I could have used modern terms I should have said that our engine is missing or that we're running on a flat tire."—Washington Star.

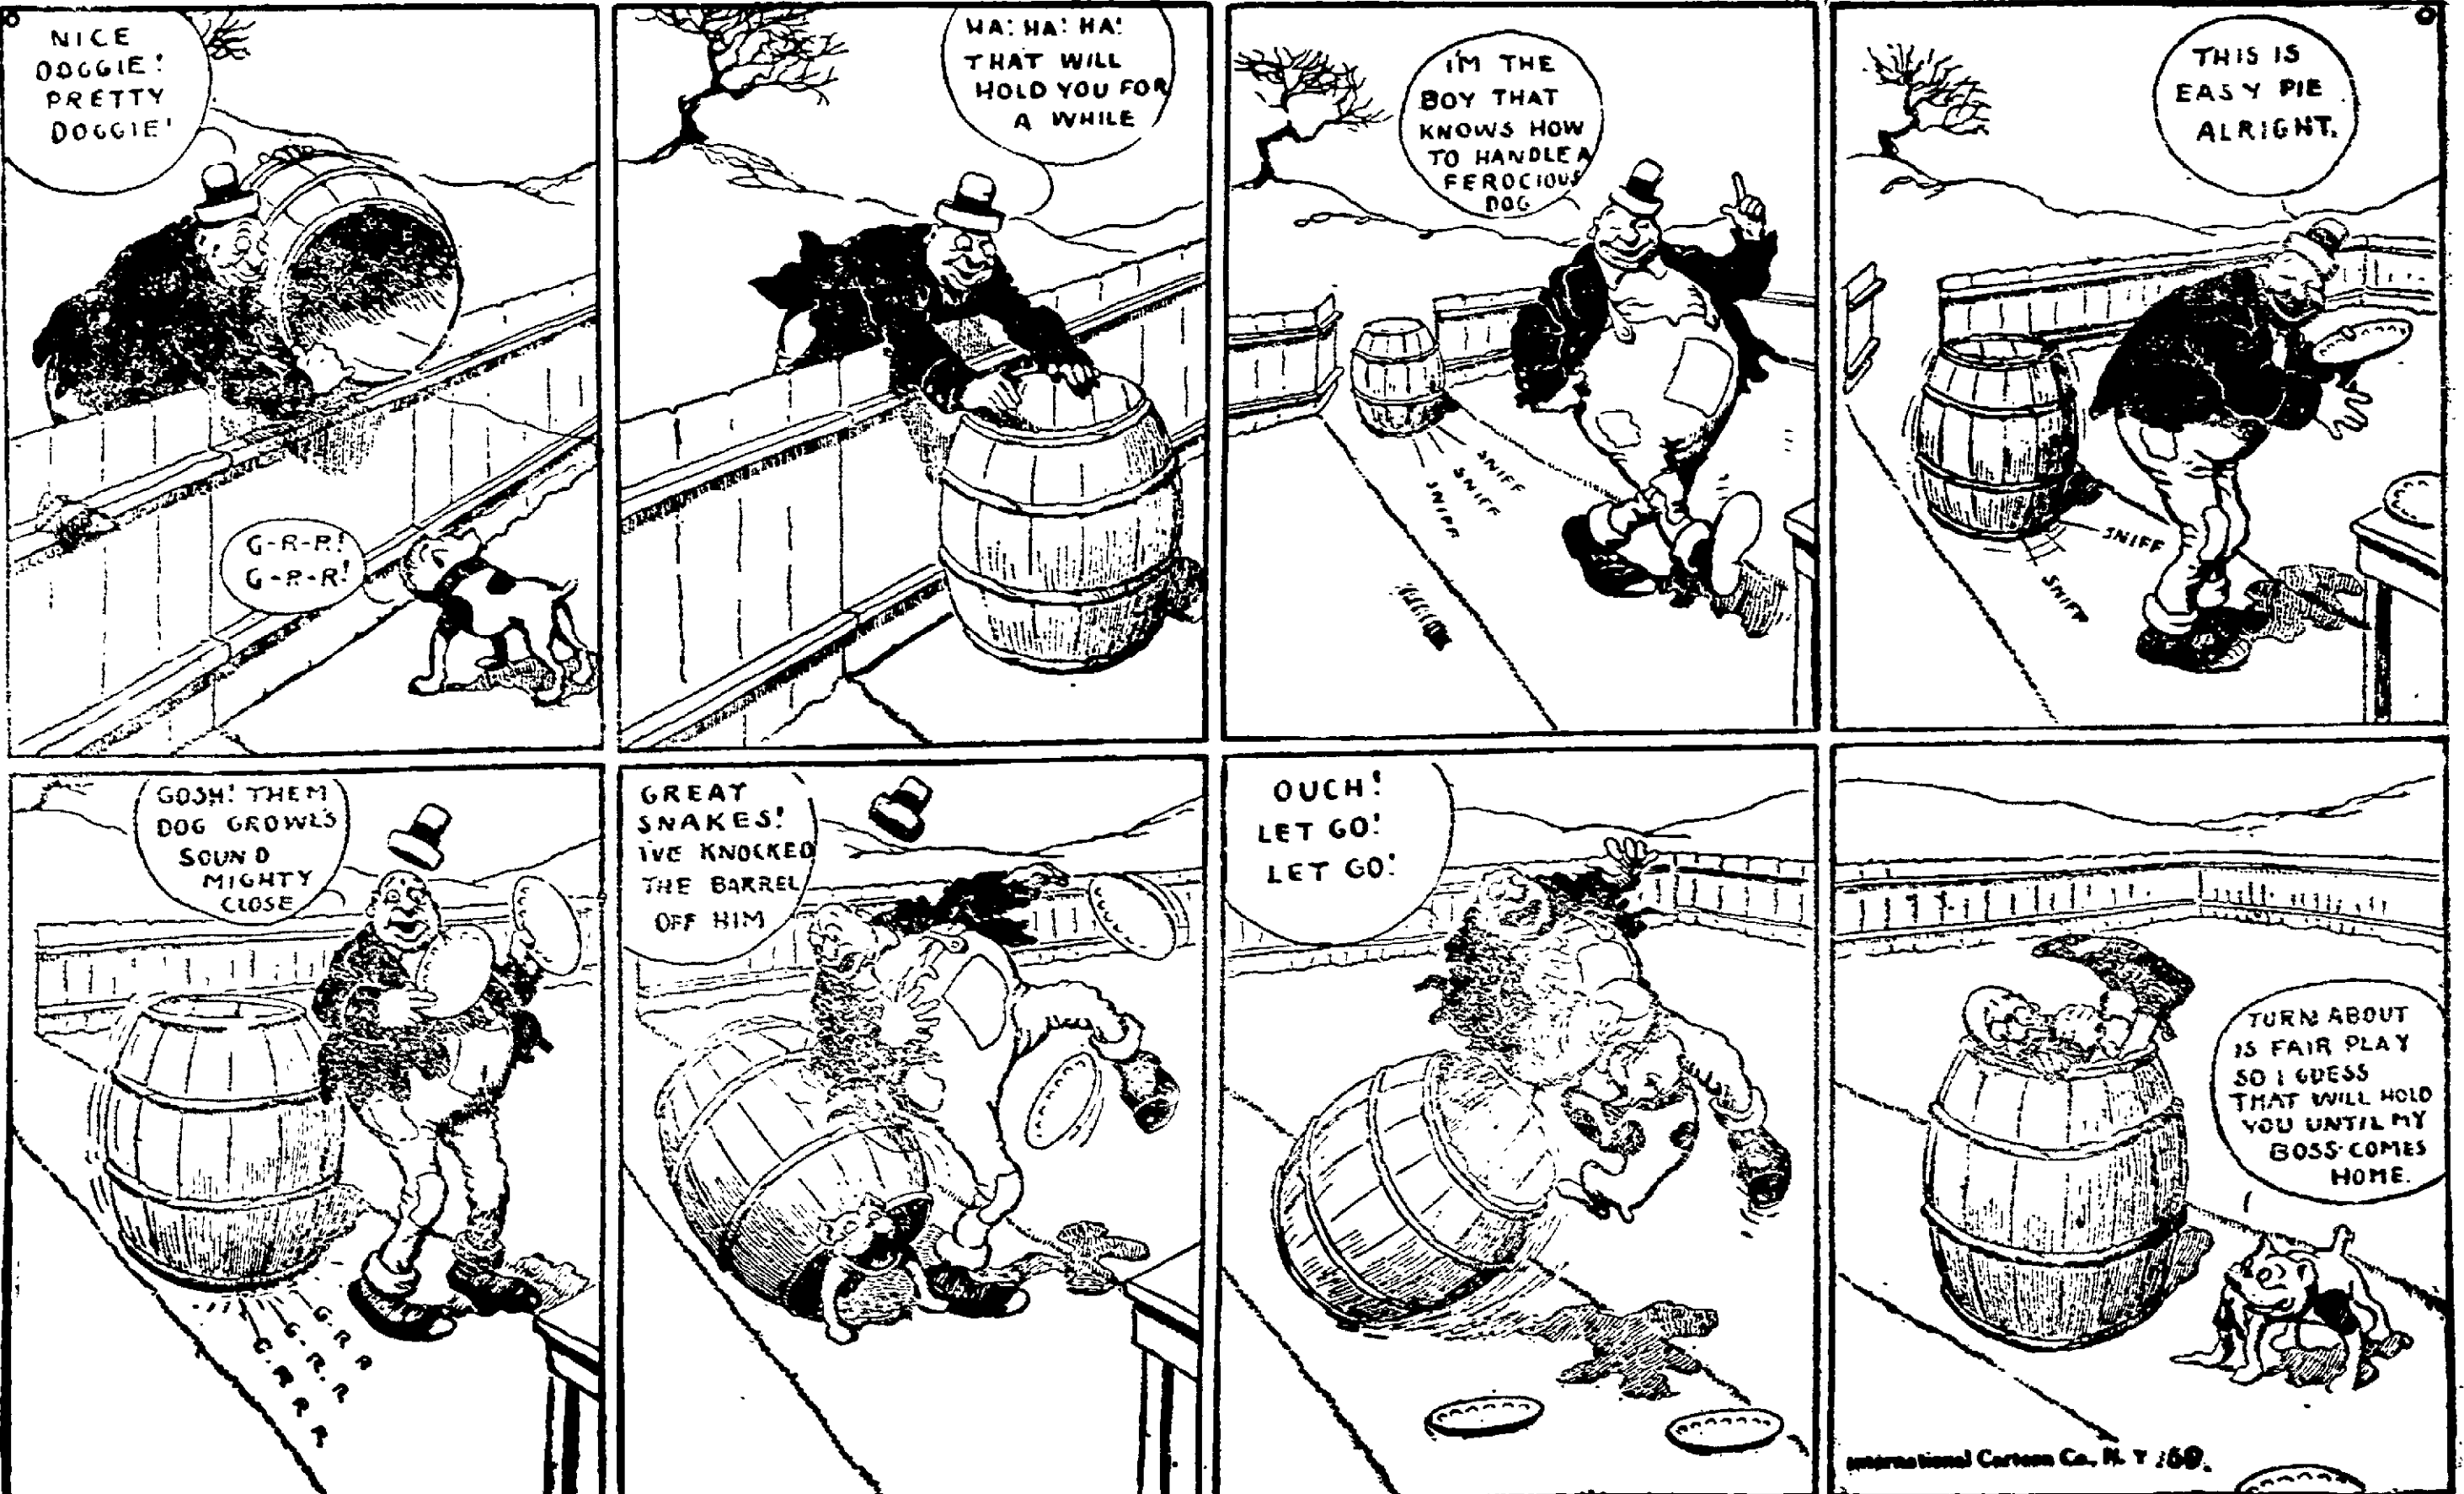

Where We Get Marble.
We import every year one-sixth of all the marble taken from the famous quarries of Carrara, Italy. There are about 500 of these quarries, and they have long yielded some of the most beautifully grained and toned marble to be found anywhere in the world.—Exchange.

A Food Freak.
An Italian pig's foot stuffed with ham meat looks like a toy. Everything but the tail of cord is eaten. This is but one of many food freaks that one finds in a visit to sunny Italy.

Sunday School Teacher.—And you have no brothers or sisters? Little Edna.—No, ma'am. I'm all the children we've got.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.
Grip Germs.
The germ of grip grows in the mouth, throat and bronchial tubes. It is spread in the same way that diphtheria and pneumonia germs are scattered.
Grip germs sometimes linger as long as a year in the air passages of those who have had the disease. They are often found in the bronchial tubes of convalescents and of persons who suffer from bronchitis. The germ is easily killed by drying and in nature does not grow outside the human body.
There is usually great carelessness about disinfecting the sputum of grip victims. The germs are therefore spread everywhere. Every care should be taken to avoid the germs. The hands, dishes and handkerchiefs of a grip patient should be carefully disinfected.
Aged and weak persons should be guarded with special care from the germs.

THE FOXY TRAMP VS. THE FOXY DOG

An Antidote

It Was Based on the Principle That Like Cures Like.

By WILLIAM CHANDLER

One morning my wife received a letter that seemed to paralyze her.

"Oh, my goodness gracious!" she exclaimed with a gasp.

"Bottom dropped out of the universe, dear?" I asked.

"Worse," Aunt Abigail will have to live with us. She's written that her friend with whom she has had a home to give up her house on the 1st of May, and that throws her out. I am her only relative, and, of course, she expects me to take her in."

"She's a bit crazy, isn't she?"

"Crazy is no name for her."

"Well, we'll have to make the best of it."

Aunt Abigail arrived. We had previously received her letter outlining our own. With the coming of our relative we saw at once that all this was changing. She settled herself down with an appearance of permanency that made my blood run cold.

"Well," she exclaimed, looking about her, "how did you ever come to build this house down in a hollow—it must have been a swamp once—when you could as well have put it up on that hill, where you could see something?"

"We live here winter and summer," Aunt Abigail. Up there we would freeze in cold weather."

"Froze! Nonsense! Some people are always afraid they'll breathe a little fresh air. I'm not. I sleep with my window open, and I like to have a gale blowing in right on me. You should have fronted your house to the south."

"I can't stand this. We must get rid of her," I said to my wife.

"To turn her out would be awful!"

"We needn't do that. We can fix it so that she will go of her own accord."

"For heaven's sake explain."

"You know the homeopathic principle—like cures like. Well, my Uncle Robert is more disagreeable, if that is possible, than my Aunt Abigail. He is a dictatorial old curmudgeon, with no respect for any one's opinion but his own. He is as poor as a church mouse, living in a miserable room in a rookery by himself. He annoys himself abusing his neighbors from his window and slaying anything he can get his hands on at the office. Now, it has occurred to me to bring him here as a foil for your aunt. She can't possibly endure to stay in the house with such a man, and when she's gone I'll find a way to get rid of Uncle Robert. Perhaps they may both go to get rid of each other."

"Your plan seems rather impracticable," she said. "But I have a good deal of confidence in those roundabout ways of yours. Suppose we try it?"

So I wrote Uncle Robert offering a home temporarily and, if he liked it, as long as he lived. He accepted eagerly, and it was not long before he was down upon us bag and baggage.

"My dear boy," he exclaimed, patting me on the back, "how you do resemble me of your father! He and I were inseparable as boys, and I've carried you on my shoulder often. And to think that I'm to have a home with you! Put me anywhere. A garret is good enough for a broken down old fiddler like me. I'll be somebody's pet soon here. Do you smoke?"

"How I smoke tobacco! It makes me feel."

"I won't smoke any more in the house," he said, "if you'll come, uncle," I said.

"Oh, don't mind me. I can stand anything, and I stand it. I've made a dead failure of life and don't deserve anything else. You don't mind my opening the window, do you—just to get the odor out?"

"Fanny has a bad cold, you know."

"Just the thing to cure her. Let her breathe the cool air of heaven."

"I went the window, and out of the room went Fanny. Half an hour after my uncle arrived dinner was announced. I was watching our guests when they entered the dining room. It was like a dog and a cat at first catching sight of each other. Both seemed to crouch for an encounter. Neither spoke to the other for some time after taking seats at table. Then a remark of Uncle Robert's ruffled Aunt Abigail.

"This woman's telling craze!" he said, beginning.

"Telling what, sir?"

"Crave, madam," raising his voice.

"I'm not deaf. I heard you well enough. I object to your calling woman's suffrage a craze."

"Are you an advocate of woman's suffrage, madam?"

"I most assuredly am."

"I believe in any one who advocates principle standing by that principle and not attempting to straddle."

"Sir?"

"That is to equivoque or knuckle under, defending the cause with all the force of her strength. For contra, I reserve the same privilege for myself. Woman's suffrage I consider the most admirable, diabolical, illogical rot that was ever sprung on a Christian people."

"And I consider it one of the holiest causes."

"Aunt Abigail," interposed my wife.

"Do let me help you to this little bit of wing. You're not eating enough to feed a sparrow."

"I'm inclined to think," remarked Uncle Robert, "that there's a good deal in this new idea of diet. This man what's-his-name who is proving that the less we eat the more work we can do is going to create a revolution."

"Have you adopted his idea?" asked Aunt Abigail spitefully.

Considering that I had just filled Uncle Robert's plate for a second time this was unkind.

"I have not, madam, for the reason that I am not yet satisfied that his views are correct. I'm nothing if not scientific. I must see a thing proved before I adopt it."

"Would you prove woman's suffrage before adopting it?"

This was quite bright of Aunt Abigail.

"I admit," replied Uncle Robert, "that to prove it before adopting it would be impossible. It isn't necessary to prove it. Any fool can see that the idea is ridiculous."

"Uncle," I interrupted for the purpose of calling a truce and preventing Aunt Abigail from firing a return shot, "let me fill your glass."

"No, sir," putting his hand over it—"not at all, sir. I drink just one glass of wine with my dinner. And that's enough for my man."

"Quite enough," I replied and filled my own for the third time.

"One is too much for my man, especially an old man," snapped the aunt. "Nobility is so different to me as an old man."

The short, white-haired old party to me, was seated at Uncle Robert's.

"Not at all," he replied. "One glass is good for the system. You know what St. Paul says, 'Take a little wine for the stomach's sake.'"

"Yes," returned Aunt Abigail, "and I know that the devil can quote Scripture."

This was so well turned that I felt like patting the old lady on the back. But it did not quench Uncle Robert for the simple reason that he was unquenchable. The skirmishing went on, getting hotter and hotter, till at last, to prevent an open rupture, my wife arose from the table. She, poor woman, was dreading a fracas, and I was not anxious to have a break occur so early in the game.

As soon as Fanny and I were alone together we sat down and laughed.

"Did you ever see anything work more beautifully?" I said, slapping my leg.

"Never."

"Let them go their own gait. My opinion is that one or the other will get out within a week."

Every day my uncle came to me and said that he couldn't live in the same house with a cat and was going tomorrow. Every day Aunt Abigail went to Fanny and said she could not possibly endure that opinionated old beathen and she was casting about for another home, but it was dreadful that she should be alone in the world, with no one to love but Fanny, and Fanny must needs be encumbered by all her husband's relatives. I told my uncle that if I were deprived of the comfort of caring for my father's brother in his old age it would break my heart. Fanny made faint hearted attempts to quiet her aunt and agreed with her that my uncle was a trifle hard to get on with, regretting at the same time that he had the same claim on me that her aunt had on her. It is true that occasionally there would be a lull in the hostilities and we would find the two chaffing quite amicably. But this was when they happened to strike some subject which was a pet with both. As soon as they drifted into topics on which they disagreed the roar of battle recommenced.

Several weeks passed in this way, and Fanny and I were getting impatient for the denouement, when one day uncle came to me and said that he would like to have a few words with me and Fanny alone. He looked very serious, and I felt quite sure he would announce his departure. He was a born confidant, and nothing would be further from his nature than to hurt one's feelings, and to appear ingrateful would break his heart. I called Fanny into the library, shut the door and waited for the old man to speak.

"My dear boy," he began, taking my hand, "and my dear little girl," taking Fanny's hand, "I have something to announce which will surprise you. I'm going to leave you."

"Oh, uncle!" we both exclaimed, trying hard to appear much disappointed, even shocked.

"Yes, I am going away, and your aunt is also going."

This was indeed a surprise.

"Your kindness has brought about a great change in two lonely lives. For a time it seemed to both of us that we must thrust our plans for the happiness of both of us. It did not seem that we could live under the same roof together."

He paused, and I thought he was going to shed tears. Then he added abruptly:

"We are both going to leave you tomorrow."

"Both?"

"Yes, both. We are to be quietly married at 9 o'clock and leave on a short wedding trip on the 10 o'clock train."

"Goodness gracious!" from Fanny.

"Great Scott!" from me.

"But we shall be gone only a few days."

"And then?" exclaimed Fanny and I breathlessly.

"And then," resumed the old man, putting a hand on each of our heads, "we return to spend the rest of our lives with our dear niece and nephew."

Heaven helps those who help themselves. At any rate, heaven came to our relief. I inherited $20,000 from a maternal uncle. Of this I put $5,000 in a house for the old couple and invested the rest in an annuity for them. Strangely enough, they are quite contented together.

The Satisfaction of Saving.

Among all material pleasures there is none so great as that which springs from a store laid by for future wants, especially for the needs of those for whose well being you have become responsible. And when you have gathered that store by steadfastly refusing thriftless self-indulgence you have a satisfaction that outweighs and outlasts all fleeting joys. I speak from my own experience, and I can call to witness the thousands of others who have traveled the same road.

Strictly speaking, all mere luxury is waste. But there may be and often is wanton wastefulness in luxury when a reasonable indulgence in it might be justifiable. That is certain to react most harmfully on soul, mind and body. It is not the accumulation, but the waste and misuse of wealth, that makes men decay.—Judson Harmon in Youth's Companion.

Poisons in the Stomach.

A most curious fact is that all food contains the elements of poison, and in our body poisons are manufactured from these. For instance, meat, fish, cheese and milk are composed of hydrogen, carbon, nitrogen and oxygen. Take away the last and you have prussic acid. We do not manufacture prussic acid, it is true. But in every stomach in the world fermentation goes on just as in a brewery, and the poisonous carbonic acid is made in large quantities. If you breathed a few days' output of carbonic acid gas, you would inevitably die. Sulphuretted hydrogen is one of the most deadly gases known, yet in every stomach it is made at one time or another. In the stomach all food is converted into what we call "peptone," and if a very small quantity of this found its way into the blood it would kill as surely as prussic acid.—Pearson's Weekly.

To Waterproof Tents.

Here is the way to waterproof cloth: Dissolve ten pounds of rosin in four gallons of hot linseed oil. Pour into a tub to which a wringer is attached. Pass the cloth through the hot oil and, as soon as well soaked, through the wringer. Spread on fence or ground immediately until thoroughly dry. Drying may take a week or more. This solution will treat about fifty yards of cloth.

For waterproofing a tent Nessmink in his "Woodcraft" gives this recipe, which he says is excellent: To ten quarts of water add ten ounces of lime and four ounces of alum. Let it stand until clear. Fold the cloth or tent snugly and put it into another vessel, pour the solution in and let it soak for twelve hours, then rinse in lukewarm rain water. Stretch and dry in the sun.

Sleep and Dreams.

The brain is more active while engaged in dreaming than when not thus engaged. The only perfect sleep is that which is dreamless. The moment the sleeper begins to dream he begins to work, and the more vivid and protracted the dream the more intense, naturally, becomes the work. It is possible that at no time during the waking hours of life is the brain so active as it is in the strange business of dreaming.

Look Ahead.

"Be a speedway," said Brother Dickey, "but understand well how you're slow up. Reason so many folks get pitched over the fence into de briar patch or life is kaze dey dunno dat de fence is dar ontill dey hits it. So watch out whar you is an' how is you!"—Atlanta Constitution.

Household Calisthenics.

The Terre Haute woman rounds out her arms by dusting chairs, moving rugs and brushing down the stairs and sweeping the floors. She gives herself a finer carriage and a staidier gait by carrying wood and coal to the domestic hearth.—Terre Haute Tribune.

Inconsistent.

"And you won't buy that antique chair I got from you ten years ago?" "No; it would be of little use to me in its present condition." "What do you mean? Why, it's more antique than ever now!"—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The Sign.

"I'm afraid Maud's second marriage is a failure." "Did she say so?" "No, but she's beginning to speak well of her first husband."

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Rules For Long Life.

There is no panacea that will bring long life to every user. "What is one man's meat is another man's poison." But a few rules are applicable to every one: Be moderate in everything. Exercise in eating, in drinking, in anything, tends to bring on old age. Be faithful in your exercise and be sure to choose an exercise that is helpful to you. Stand and sit erect and use your lungs. Keep your teeth and gums and throat clean. The mouth is the principal port of entry for undesirable immigrant micro-organisms. Be careful to maintain the bowel functions. The digestive tract is a favorite abiding place for hordes of marauding bacteria. Have your body occasionally examined.—Hawthorne Daniel in World's Work.

There is no suncure in the soul's economy. Every power has its work to do, every capacity its gift to fill it.—Phillips Brooks.

Hoggish.

Constituent—I worked hard for you and deserve some reward. Mayor—Some reward! Didn't I shake hands with you twice in public—before the election?—Exchange.

What's gone and what's past help should be past grief.—Shakespeare.

Soap an Antiseptic.

Some medical authorities, explaining the abatement of epidemic diseases in recent years, are sufficiently free from professional ties to attribute this betterment of conditions not to medical science, but to the increased use of soap and water. Many medical authorities hold the opinion that with a clean house and a clean person no one need have much fear of infection. A writer in the New York Medical Record says: "Soap is now recognized to be antiseptic and to be efficacious must produce a lather. Bacteria rubbed into soap or dropped on its surface are incapable of multiplication. The typhoid bacillus is very sensitive to soap, being killed by a 5 per cent solution in a short time. More than half the total number will die in a minute. The thorough use of a pure potash soap is not only a mechanical method of cleansing, but is an active factor in cutting down germ life."—Exchange.

The Rubber Situation.

We as a people are almost absolutely dependent on Great Britain for our supply of rubber, as the great plantations are largely controlled by British capital. There are several possibilities for making us independent of any other country for our crude rubber supply. One is a plant called guayule, which is even now being successfully raised in this country and which has been successfully raised in Mexico. There are several other rubber bearing plants also which might be raised in this country. But the largest field seems to be the Philippine Islands, where plantation rubber can be produced cheaply and well. Capital has held off, owing to the uncertain future of these islands, but local conditions there are good for a large rubber industry.—Andrew H. King in Metallurgical and Chemical Engineering.

Telephones We Use.

A recent calculation as to the average number of people to every telephone places Chicago and Albany in the lead, with 6.1 people to a telephone. Los Angeles is next with 6.8, followed by Washington with 7.2 and Detroit with 7.8. Boston has 8.4, New York 8.5 and Philadelphia 11.5. Jersey City showed the least development, with one telephone to every 23.8 people. Other cities are as follows: St. Louis 12.7; Pittsburgh, 11.5; Cleveland, 11.9; Newark, 17.9; Buffalo, 12.3; Providence, 19.1 and Rochester, 1.3, while the average of all these cities was 11.2.
